A few kilometers from Florence, an extraordinary sixteenth-century complex of significant historical and architectural prestige, which in the sixteenth century belonged to the powerful family of Francesco del Giocondo, husband of the Mona Lisa known as “la Gioconda”. The villa then passed to the Antinori family, hence its name – Villa Antinori di Monte Aguglioni – and then again many times until the current owners. This exceptional complex, immersed in a 27-hectares (66,7185 acres) divided into gardens, tree-lined avenues and a large forest, consists of the main villa and numerous appurtenances such as the caretaker’s house, buildings for agricultural
